Should those that promote these as KOLs start being held accountable as well? In crypto all we have is Reputation, these folks should at least have a negative mark against whatever crypto “trust” or “weight” that they may hold within the General community and even the smaller communities within. $PATS

<https://solscan.io/token/35fN6LMYt6cKsemgbR28nFooJtcnvaKPCeRXyuMKfoF>

The screenshot shows the Solscan.io token page for $PATS. At the top, there's a header with a search bar and navigation links for Buy, Exchange, Play, and Gaming. Below the header, the token name is listed as PATS ($PATS) with a token address of 35fN6L...uMKfoF. A note indicates that the owner program is the Token Program. A callout box from Solscan Pro V2 API provides decoding information. The Market Overview section shows the current price, market cap, and holder count. The Profile Summary section includes details like decimals (6), authority, creator, and token extensions. The main content area displays a list of top holders:

Holder	Address	Balance	Value
opensvm.com	25,066,991.199909 SVMAI	$140,075.12	$0.005588
PATS	320,900,530.658058 PATS	$41,129.82	$0.0001281
Crypto Twitter	10,000 CT	$15.62	$0.001562
Peepo	50,000 PEEP	$0.352	$0.00000704

At the bottom, a button labeled "VIEW ALL HOLDINGS" is visible.

0xRinegate is still holding $PATS and $SVMAI in a separate wallet. About $200K USD, yet he's still begging for money via a donation wallet and asking for the community to pump the token past 10 Million and hold it there. I wonder why?

He's obviously trying to hit a certain target in Profit. Could be $1M or Millions seeing as he's already made over 6-figures Easily between all of these projects or Rugs.

The image shows two tweets from the user @0xrinegade on the X/Twitter platform. Both tweets are from the account "rinezade (svm/acc) ✅".

Tweet 1: "Replies to @0xrinegade" - "lol if u guys push $svmai above 10m and keep it there, ill publish json with 250 rpc nodes, that will be free forever for token holders" - 7 replies, 13 retweets, 67 likes, 2.9K views.

Tweet 2: "Replies to @0xsachi @virtuals_io and 2 others" - "just dont miss $SVMAI thats all you need from memecoins, lots of fundamental open source tek being developed" - 0 replies, 0 retweets, 5 likes, 163 views.

$SVMAI

<https://dexscreener.com/solana/5xsqxhj1ao2ycaia4m3jqf3jexyrjky5cekfuf58st8>

What is it? A supposed Solscan.io Killer.

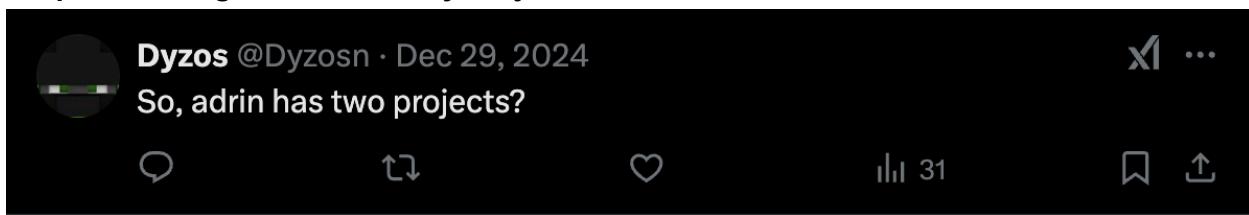

What is the status? We've tested this app personally multiple times and you still cannot connect a wallet which is a simple integration nor can you use AI to search transactions or do anything for that matter. It's a UI with 1-5 API calls that display data. You can lookup tokens addresses to get "Total Supply" but that's about it.

Does it have the basics? Roadmap/White Paper & Documentation etc.? No.

can @memechan_gg launch a memecoin in your honour?

The Question remains Is whether he can actually deliver on EVERYTHING he's promised including what was promised via $RIN, $PIX404 and $SVMAI. I'm not sure what $CHAN was, it was some sort of Pre-Sale but I'm not sure what the product was supposed to be or if it was just a meme. The obvious answer is NO, He cannot. Why are we saying this? Take a look below.

The reason Why we come to this conclusion is due to various factors:

1. Development work is time consuming and difficult to maintain large, complex codebased.

- Development work is inherently time-consuming and complex, especially when maintaining large, intricate codebases. As a Software Engineer with 16 years of experience, I can confidently say that blockchain development is even more challenging due to limited documentation. While AI can help bridge certain gaps, there's no justification for the complete lack of updates on development activity. Regular updates—whether weekly or monthly—via an official forum are standard practice. Instead, all we see are hyped-up tweets on the founder's personal Twitter, showcasing features and screenshots designed to excite, with no real substance or accountability.

2. Lack Of Market Research and Conceptual Documentation

- From an engineering perspective, replacing an existing product or software requires a thorough analysis of the current solution: understanding what it does and the value it provides to its users. These are the very users you'll need to win over. Yet, for an ambitious goal like replacing Solscan.io, there's no evidence of any market research or detailed conceptual documentation to support the project's viability. This glaring oversight is a fundamental flaw in any serious development effort.

3. The basic MVP Features ARE NOT THERE.

- Upon reviewing the application, it's evident that it lacks even the most basic MVP functionality—hardly a sign of progress toward a working product akin to Solscan.io with integrated AI features. Let's break this down further.

Why do you think that? Im invested heavy into $SVMAI because of you. If you think its agents because of the price action, its just people rotating to try catch profits. Ngl I am also one of those people, but I invest all my profits back into $SVMAI. We are all waiting for a working product, once that is out, it will only go up. But right now, everyone is investing in hopes you can achieve what you're saying you can build

4. Lack Of Honesty and Transparency.

- It's clear from our review that the founder operates entirely remotely, maintaining minimal public accountability. Notably, an exchange between 0xRinegate and what appears to be a doxxed founder or crypto builder raises questions about his credibility.

If you're on this list and would like your name removed, just let us know and we'll happily oblige. We apologize in advance and only look to be transparent so we can support one another and form a large community.

Conclusion

The patterns of behavior, lack of transparency, and absence of tangible progress in these projects paint a clear picture of mismanagement and potential deceit. From missing MVP functionality to the neglect of proper market research and consistent development updates, the evidence suggests a disregard for the fundamental principles of project development and accountability in the blockchain space.

For those looking to invest or participate in projects led by 0xRinegate, this breakdown serves as a cautionary tale. The crypto industry thrives on innovation, trust, and the collective effort of its community. It's up to us as builders, investors, and enthusiasts to hold founders accountable and demand transparency. Only through vigilance and a commitment to these values can we ensure the space grows in the right direction.

Proceed with caution, and always do your own research (DYOR).
